Reference is made to the following document:

D1: DE 37 41 158 A (STOCKHAUSEN CHEM FAB GMBH) (1989-06-15)

1. Novelty (PCT Article 33(2))

The subject matter of the present claims 1 to 18 is novel over the prior art as cited in the international search report. None of the international search report citations shows a method for producing an agglomerated superabsorber particle which involves the following steps:

- A) bringing superabsorber fine particles, of which at least 40% have a particle size of less than 150µm, into contact with a fluid containing at least 10% of a crosslinkable polymer with carboxyl groups,
- B) cross-linking the particles thus treated at temperatures of 20-300°C, wherein
 - a) the crosslinkable polymer contains further groups able to react with the carboxyl group in a condensation-, addition- or ring-opening reaction, and/or

b) the fluid contains a cross-linking agent.

Furthermore, none of the search report citations indicates a superabsorber particle according to claims 10 or 11.

2. Inventive step (PCT Article 33(3))

The subject matter of the present claims 1 to 18 involves an inventive step since neither from D1, which can be considered the closest prior art, alone nor in conjunction with any other document cited in the search report is it possible to derive any suggestion as to the claimed method, for the following reasons:

D1 likewise discloses a method for producing an agglomerated superabsorber particle.

The method claimed in the the present claims differs from the method known from D1 in that a crosslinkable polymer containing a carboxyl group is brought into contact with the superabsorber fine particles instead of an agglomeration promoting agent which contains no further crosslinking agents, as is disclosed in D1.

In comparison with the teaching of D1, the problem addressed by the present application consists in providing a further good method for reducing the fine-particle fraction in superabsorber particles, these particles being easy to dose when they are worked into hygiene articles.

The applicant has shown in numerous examples that it was possible to solve the problem of interest using the claimed method.

Since none of the available documents contains the teaching as to bringing a crosslinkable polymer into contact with superabsorber particles so as to reduce the proportion of fine particles, the claimed method was not suggested by the prior art either. An inventive step can therefore be acknowledged.
